Real DECK®

In our business, we think only about natural materials that do not lose value and beauty even with time. We only work with suppliers who respect the sustainable management of forest resources. Using wood, we protect non-renewable raw material resources for future generations and, in addition, positively impact our society, economy and environment. It is important that the public understands this context and is aware of the positive impacts of wood used in everyday life.

Of all the possible materials that can be used for terraces, we sell wood because we think about wood, we offer wood, and we sell wood, and in doing so, we help:

- conserve non-renewable resources
- maintain sustainable forest management for future generations
- balance all three pillars of sustainable development: economic, social and environmental

More and more builders, planners and architects are choosing to use and apply wood and wood-based construction in their construction. It is very pleasing that the terms 'energy saving' and 'green building' are increasingly being used associated with technologies based on wood as a basic building material. Living with wood is part of a certain generous and unconstrained approach to life, a return to natural values. It gives a feeling of a cosy, pleasant and warm environment, and this fact is perceived very positively by people. Wood breathes, provides a pleasant climate and positively affects the human psyche and immune system. Wood is a natural raw material, renewable, fully recyclable and inexhaustible if managed wisely. Wood has very good thermal insulation properties, lowers thermal conductivity, and significantly higher heat storage. Wood as a natural material opens up creative and technical possibilities that are difficult to realise with other materials.

AU-MEX has been purchasing wood products worldwide for more than 22 years, and REAL DECK wooden terraces are one of our company's main sales commodities.
